

Cell phone companies should be required to disclose all fees that will be charged when people sign up for service, including all added fees, tax rates, etc. Simply giving a monthly price to consumers is rather misleading when people are trying to compare the price of cellular plans.